Gov. Pritzker Lays Out Eight Principles for a Clean and Renewable Illinois Economy

With a commitment to “put the State of Illinois on a path toward 100% clean energy by 2050,” Governor Pritzker issued a public report that begins to map out that path. Among the eight principles: expanding consumer affordability protections; implementing a market-based solution that supports clean power and air; and electrifying and decarbonizing Illinois transportation. ## Environmental Justice in Evanston

An Environmental Justice Resolution in Evanston will help achieve a more sustainable and equitable future for all Evanston residents. The City recently took another next step in that direction when a draft of the Environmental Justice Resolution was approved with minor modifications by both the Evanston Environmental Board and the Equity and Empowerment Commission. Environmental Justice Evanston (EJE) played a key role in moving this forward and will continue to do so. The resolution will next be reviewed and approved by the City Council’s Planning and Development Committee. If you or your organization want to review and endorse the resolution, please email EJE at

Members of EJE also published an editorial in the Evanston RoundTable responding to the City's recently released Air Quality Study related to the Waste Transfer Station on Church St. Entitled ""Final Air Quality Study Only a Beginning,"" the article assesses the study's benefits and limitations.

Moving Towards Safer Biking and Walking on Oakton, Church and Chicago

Three street infrastructure projects are currently in play in Evanston and are in different phases. While the Church St. and Chicago Ave. projects are farther along, the Oakton St. project is still in the first phase and the City wants your input in its Oakton Street Corridor Survey. If you walk, bike, or drive this corridor, let the City benefit from your views. (Home Depot, Pet Smart, Aldi and GFS Food Service are at its western end; if you shop there, you use this corridor.) The deadline for the survey has been extended to October 31.

What Is Community Solar? Join One of These Webinars and Find Out

If your roof doesn't get year-round sun or you live in an apartment building, you can still help create clean energy by subscribing to community solar, banding together with other Evanston community members and subscribing to a solar farm. How can you do that? Find out by joining one of the upcoming free webinars this month on Tuesday, Sept. 15 or Thursday, Sept. 24, both from 7:00 - 8:00 p.m. In the meantime, you can learn more about community solar here.

Illinois is Offering Low-Income Home Energy Assistance Program (LIHEAP)

During this difficult time, do you know anyone who needs home energy assistance? Let them know that the state has launched a new initiative to help eligible low-income households pay for home energy services. This includes assistance with heating, gas, propane and electricity. Those

Food Matters

If you're growing more beans than you can pick or are surprised just how productive chard, kale and basil can be, share some with those in need of fresh, healthy food! Edible Evanston's produce sharing program continues through mid-October, and has been delivering about 10 coolers full of produce each week to Hillside Food Pantry. Just drop your extra produce in the coolers at McCormick or Twiggs Community Garden on Friday evening-Saturday morning, or Tuesday evening through mid-day Wednesday at Ridgeville Community House gardens.

Edible Evanston is also seeking volunteers to help maintain the Eggleston Park Food Forest on Tuesday or Thursday evenings through September, or the 1st and 3rd Saturday of each month from 11:00 a.m. to 1:00 p.m. Get details and registration here.

Evanston Recertified as a Community Wildlife Habitat

It was a great milestone when Evanston achieved certification as a community wildlife habitat last year. But the work didn't stop there – the National Wildlife Federation recently re-certified the City in recognition of its community outreach, habitat acres restored and maintained, litter picked up around Evanston, and the number of people taking the pollinator pledge. Thanks to Natural Habitat Evanston \(NHE\) for helping coordinate the efforts.

Volunteer to Help Evanston Maintain Its Green Spaces

There are opportunities throughout Evanston where you can roll up your sleeves and pitch in by helping to cut back invasive species, watering plants and trees, and more. Below are locations, times (as available) and contacts to help you plan your volunteer time.
